The hedge fund space attracts a wide variety of institutional investors, with assets both large and small. The Chart of the Month shows the distribution of investors' allocations to hedge funds based upon their assets under management. This month we have seen a number of institutional investors revealing new plans for their hedge fund portfolios.

One example is Hatteras Funds, a $1.4bn hybrid fund of funds manager, which is now looking to target long/short equity and structured credit hedge funds in emerging markets. However, the firm is also below its overall target allocation to tactical trading strategies and therefore may also be open to new investments in managed futures and global macro funds. The group plans on reducing its exposure to distressed funds in order to make room for the increase. Hatteras invests on an opportunistic basis, with no specific targets in terms of the number of funds to invest in or the amount to commit. It currently allocates 75% of its hybrid fund of funds to hedge fund investments and has around 40 investments in its core hedge fund portfolio, with a bite-size of around $20-25mn per vehicle.

Also on the hunt for new funds is New Mexico State Investment Council, which has ramped up its target allocation to hedge funds from 5% to 8% of AUM, paving the way for potential new investments. At present, the $15.6bn sovereign wealth fund is undecided as to whether it will search for new managers or allocate to existing managers, but expects to have a more solid plan by the end of 2012. At present it has relationships with three managed account funds of hedge funds, which maintain an underlying portfolio featuring a diverse range of complimentary hedge fund strategies.

Prelude Capital, which manages over $600mn in assets, is looking to expand its risk-based managed account platform. At present the platform has a profile of 30 hedge fund managers and focuses predominately on long/short equity, quantitative macro and risk arbitrage strategies. Prelude does not have a set number of funds to target, but will maintain a similar strategic focus – investing in liquid strategies – and will allocate to both emerging and established managers, with an average commitment size of $20mn per fund.

One investor that is planning on allocating capital to hedge funds for the first time is Vancouver Foundation. The CAD 670mn institution plans on investing in the space within the next 12 months and intends to allocate an as of yet undecided amount of capital to two multi-strategy direct hedge funds.

Other hedge fund investors, however, are exiting the space. Vestian Group, the $100mn multi-manager, has decided to shutter its fund of hedge funds and has no plans to launch any new funds in the foreseeable future. Launched in 2009, the fund invested in around 20-30 underlying hedge funds across a wide range of strategies. Elsewhere, €12.5bn Timeos has revealed that it is no longer investing in hedge funds. The pension fund first began allocating to the asset class in 2008, but decided to exit these investments in 2011. Previously, it had allocated approximately 2.5% of its assets under management to hedge funds and was invested in four multi-managers. While it has no specific plans to re-enter the asset class, it will not rule out making new investments in the future.
