

Investors Prepare for a Market Shift in 2019

Widespread expectation that a downturn is due imminently is guiding investors' intentions for their portfolios in the year ahead

The Preqin Investor Outlook: Alternative Assets H1 2019 finds that 61% of institutions now think that equity markets are at a peak at the start of 2019. This proportion has been rising over the past 18 months, and the sentiment has raised concerns that equity markets are due for a correction in the near future. For some institutions, this is impacting their approach to their alternative assets portfolios: key reasons investors give for investing in the industry include portfolio diversification, inflation hedging, high risk-adjusted returns and non-correlation to other asset classes. The roles that alternative assets perform for investors are becoming more pivotal in the face of a potential downturn. Increasingly, investors are beginning to act accordingly – a quarter are looking to commit more to private capital as a result of their market outlook, while 40% of hedge fund investors are positioning their portfolios more defensively in response.

Amy Bensted, Head of Data Products:

“Concerns about the future trajectory of equity markets have moved to the forefront of investors’ thoughts in the past 18 months. It’s no surprise that this is throwing the role of alternative assets into sharper focus – among the advantages that investors cite are its long-term performance, diversification and non-correlation; key tools for capital protection in the face of a downturn. The general outlook is positive for the industry: investors have turned increasingly to alternatives through the long boom period, and their appetite does not look set to diminish with the onset of more difficult times. Indeed, the industry is likely to play a key role in helping institutions navigate short-term headwinds. But this appetite comes with greater scrutiny: across all asset classes, investors are putting their faith in experienced fund managers and truly non-correlated strategies, adding to the challenges facing less experienced managers and more trend-following strategies.”
